

New Garlic Exports Are Smooth, Low Prices Stimulate Overseas Demand

"The new garlic export season has begun in mid-to-late May. China Garlic Prices have experienced early rises and subsequent declines in the past few weeks. Now they are showing a slight upward trend. Overall, the market price of new garlic is lower and the quality is significantly better than in previous years. "Ms. Chen said in an interview with FRESH PLAZA. "Compared with the previous season, garlic production has increased this season. This is mainly due to the relatively stable climatic conditions throughout the year, which is conducive to the growth of garlic. The increase in market supply has led to lower export prices, which has further stimulated the purchase desire of overseas buyers. As far as the current situation is concerned, the export of new garlic is very smooth. At this stage, the export price of garlic has fallen by more than 50% compared with the same period last year. We are currently exporting new garlic to many countries and regions such as the Middle East, Brazil, Europe and Africa. The demand from overseas markets is very strong. As an experienced garlic exporter, we can supply different specifications of red and white garlic according to the diverse needs of our customers. "